On Saturday evenings this past October, Monticello was transformed by an inspiring display of color, light and sounds. Illuminated by digital projection mapping artist Jeff Dobrow, Jefferson’s home served as a canvas for a three-act interpretation of the ideals of the Declaration of Independence. “The projection moves through feelings of rigidity and constriction to disruption and expansion, and culminates in a celebration of playful, dancing light,” says Dobrow. These family-friendly events were part of the Charlottesville Arts Excursion and included food, beverages and live music.
